

Northeastern

Department of African American Studies

Job Announcement:

Assistant Professor of African American Studies

The Department of African American Studies (DAAS) at NORTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY invites applications for a tenure-track assistant appointment beginning Fall 2010. We seek candidates with strong research and teaching interests in the African, African American and/ or Black Diasporic experience. Although specialization is open, we will be most excited to consider applicants who are working in fields that overlap with our strategic plan for expanding the department's intellectual reach.

These fields include: public health (epidemiology); business (micro-enterprise/micro-finance); technology (community policy/ innovation) and political economy. Candidates with a variety of methodological and pedagogical approaches will be considered. The successful candidate will have a completed Ph.D. in an appropriate discipline by the beginning date of appointment (August 2010). The successful scholar will maintain an active program of research and scholarship and publication in her/ his area of specialization with an underlying commitment to interdisciplinary research and undergraduate teaching. For full consideration, materials must be received by Monday, November 30, 2009.

The mission of Northeastern University's Department of African American Studies is to mentor intellectual leaders, develop emerging scholars and to train global citizens who are able to explore the world from diverse perspectives in an ever increasingly global and interdisciplinary world. As a community of international and interdisciplinary scholars, practitioners and community leaders we aim to create and translate knowledge to meet global and societal needs. For more information on the Department, please visit <http://www.northeastern.edu/DAAS>.

Review of applications will begin on Monday, November 30, 2009. To apply, please visit the College of Arts and Sciences website, <http://www.northeastern.edu/cas/>, and click on Faculty Positions, or if viewing this through a Northeastern University website, simply click the button below.

Northeastern University is an Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action Educational Institution and Employer, Title IX University. Northeastern University particularly welcomes applications from minorities, women and persons with disabilities. Northeastern University is an E-verify Employer.