NUSL's Student-lead Human Rights Caucus Invites You to Take Action:

LOCALLY

Celebrate the anniversary of UDHR by becoming a human rights activist at NUSL. Learn about the pertinent work of Professor Martha Davis and be a part of launching NUSL's student-led human rights caucus. Professor Davis will discuss the ongoing work of advocates and attorneys to implement a domestic human rights policy blueprint under the new administration. The student caucus will work intimately with the US Human Rights Network. We will utilize an international legal frame work to ensure human rights here at home by educating law students, community members and younger students through trainings and discussions of successful national examples. Human rights are interdependent, universal and protected best through social movements. Join this one!
