Graduate School of Arts and Sciences
Language Approval Form

This language program is available for Masters and PhD students who need a language for their fieldwork or other scholarly research. The credits will not count toward the credits needed to complete the degree. Tuition will be paid either by the student him- or herself or, at the discretion of the department, a student on SGA award may have the tuition covered by the SGA award.

Language Approval Form Directions and Helpful Information

This language program is available to Masters and PhD students who need a language for their fieldwork or other scholarly research.

Once the Graduate School signs the form, the GSAS will return the original to the student and give a copy to the department.

The student should then contact Professor Dennis Cokely (d.cokely@neu.edu or 617-373-3064) prior to the start of registration for the semester in which they wish to enroll. Professor Cokely will identify the appropriate level of the language for the student, the appropriate CPS Directed Study course number and an available undergraduate level section of the language.

The section of the language they wish to study must be one that has sufficient undergraduate enrollments such that it will definitely be offered (i.e. the presence of the graduate student cannot be the determining factor in whether or not the course runs or not).

The one-credit Directed Study will be graded on a pass/fail (S/U) basis and will not count toward the student’s Ph.D. degree requirements.

To receive a grade for the Directed Study, a graduate student must fulfill all the course requirements stated on the syllabus (attendance, quizzes, mid-term and final exams) of the undergraduate language section to which he or she has been assigned.

Students on SGA awards may have tuition for the course covered at the discretion of their department.

Students will be able to repeat the Directed Study up to four times.
