

As a graduate student at Northeastern University, I have always been passionate about contributing to the growth and development of the academic community. During my time as a senator for the finance committee at the Northeastern Graduate committee, I had the opportunity to work on various initiatives that helped me find explore my leadership qualities.

Our team's efforts also included introducing new funding initiatives aimed at supporting graduate students in their academic pursuits. These initiatives helped students access more funding opportunities, which, in turn, contributed to their academic and personal success.

My passion for contributing to the academic community has driven me to apply for the position of Vice President - External Affairs. I believe that as Vice President, I can leverage the knowledge and experience I gained from the finance committee to build strong relationships with other colleges across the country and other Northeastern satellite campuses.

By bringing together student governments from various universities, I plan to create a platform for knowledge sharing and collaboration, which will ultimately contribute to the academic and personal growth of all graduate students. I plan to work on initiatives aimed at promoting Northeastern University's commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusion and sharing our best practices with other universities.

My goal is to create a positive impact on the broader academic community by fostering relationships and collaborations with other institutions. I believe that this position offers me an excellent opportunity to make meaningful contributions to the academic community, and I am excited to take on this challenge.

In summary, I am motivated to apply for this position because of my passion for contributing to the academic community. My experience as a senator for the finance committee at Northeastern Graduate committee has given me valuable insights into how universities can promote financial literacy and support students' academic pursuits. As Vice President - External Affairs, I look forward to using this knowledge and experience to build strong relationships with other colleges and create a positive impact on the broader academic community.
