Marielena Hincapié is executive director of the National Immigration Law Center (NILC), headquartered in Los Angeles. Founded in 1979, NILC is dedicated to defending and advancing the rights of low-income immigrants in the United States. Under her leadership, NILC has grown to be one of the premier immigrants' rights organizations, strategically using a combination of litigation, policy, communications and alliance-building to affect social change.

Fully bilingual and bicultural, Hincapié serves as a resource and is often interviewed by media outlets such as Univisión, The New York Times and the Los Angeles Times, among others. She is a frequent lecturer at national and international conferences, and works closely with emerging leaders in the social justice movement.

The Daynard Public Interest Visiting Fellows Program brings distinguished public interest practitioners to campus each academic year for a three-day visit. The fellows serve as role models for students, demonstrating how legal skills can be used effectively and creatively to make the world a better place. This vibrant program was established in 2004 through the generosity of Professor Richard A. Daynard, president of the law school's Public Health Advocacy Institute, and his wife, Carol Iskols Daynard.
